Brief

Huangshan's special cuisine and local customs are unique. The stinky mandarin fish is fresh and fragrant after fermentation, the hairy tofu is fried with white wool until crispy on the outside and tender on the inside, and the Huangshan sesame cake has thin layers and fragrant fillings. Pick tea in spring and dry it in autumn. The melodious sound of Hui opera can be heard among the white walls and black tiles of the ancient village. The folk customs of the solar terms hide the awe of nature. In the streets and alleys of fireworks, the taste of food blends with the landscape and humanities, showing the elegance and warmth of Huizhou.

Sights

Huangshan Scenic Area 黄山风景区

Huangshan has been one of the most famous mountains in China since ancient times. Strange pines, strange rocks, sea of clouds and hot springs are known as the "four wonders" of Huangshan. In addition, rime, snow and sunrise are also sights that tourists will not miss. The ancients said, "After visiting the Five Sacred Mountains, you will not look at other mountains. After visiting Huangshan, you will not look at other mountains."

Travel Season

◎ Huangshan has different scenery in all seasons, especially in summer and autumn, when it is the peak tourist season, with the most suitable temperature and lush greenery. Although winter is also beautiful, it is not recommended to climb Huangshan in winter because the temperature on the top of the mountain is too low and the mountain roads are icy and slippery, which can easily cause danger.

② Emerald Valley 翡翠谷

The Emerald Valley is located 8 kilometers northeast of Tangkou Town, Huangshan City, close to the southern gate of Huangshan

Scenic Area. It is a great place to watch the water because of the many emerald pools and waterfalls formed by the streams in the valley and the swaying bamboo forests.

Eating

Huangshan's cuisine and customs are full of charm. Huangshan wontons have thin skin and tender fillings, and are fragrant in the bone soup; crab shell yellow biscuits are crispy and salty, and are even more pleasant when paired with tea. Here, people pick tea in spring and dry it in autumn. In front of the ancient stage, Hui opera is melodious, and the fireworks are full of the warmth given by nature and the elegance accumulated over time.

◆ Stinky Mandarin Fish 臭鳜鱼

This is a classic Huizhou dish with a history of more than 200 years. It has a unique fermentation process. Although it smells "stinky", it has a bright red color after cooking, is fragrant and fresh, and the fish meat is crispy and tender.

◆ Huangshan sesame cake 黄山烧饼

Huangshan sesame cakes are shaped like crab shells and are as thin as paper. Dried plums and fresh meat are mixed together and baked over charcoal fire. The outer skin is crispy and the filling is salty and slightly sweet. When you take a bite, you can feel the warmth of the streets of Huizhou.

◆ Hairy tofu 毛豆腐

The outer layer of hairy tofu is covered with white fluff. After fermentation, it becomes bright and shiny. After being fried until golden brown, it is crispy on the outside and tender on the inside, salty and delicious. It is a culinary legend created by the people of Huizhou.

◆ Yipin Hotpot 一品锅

Huangshan Yipin Pot is a local specialty dish. Chicken, duck, fish, meat and other ingredients are stacked in a clay pot in order, and paired with vegetables such as radish and tofu. It is boiled over high heat and simmered over low heat. The dishes are rich, the soup is rich, and the ingredients are well-seasoned, crispy and fragrant. It is the protagonist of rural festivals and family gatherings, symbolizing reunion and happiness. It carries the Huizhou people's love for life and cherishment of gatherings with relatives and friends, and fully demonstrates the warmth of the countryside and the atmosphere of fireworks.

◆ Huangshan Twin Stones 黄山双石

Huangshan Shuangshi is a representative of Anhui cuisine. The ingredients come from Huangshan: the stone chicken is a mountain stream frog with tender meat, known as the "king of frogs"; the stone ear is a cliff lichen, smooth and rich in gelatin. The two are slowly stewed with mountain spring water and ham. The stone chicken is tender and tasty, and the stone ear absorbs the essence of the soup. The soup is clear and delicious. It has both the aura of the mountains and the nourishing effect. It is a masterpiece that combines the gift of nature with the cooking skills of Anhui cuisine.

◆ Mountain Bamboo Shoots 山笋

Huangshan bamboo shoots are the fresh gifts from the Huangshan bamboo forest. The bamboo shoots are plump like jade, tender and sweet, and rich in dietary fiber and a variety of trace elements. Huizhou people follow the principle of "eating in season" and steam them to show their original flavor. The bamboo shoots are fragrant and refreshing like the mountain breeze; stewing them with bacon makes them mellow, with the salty fragrance blending with the freshness of bamboo shoots, and the soup is clear and sweet; shredded and stir-fried with snow vegetables and mushrooms, they are crispy and refreshing, showing the vitality of spring.
